RABAT (CAPITAL OF MOROCCO)

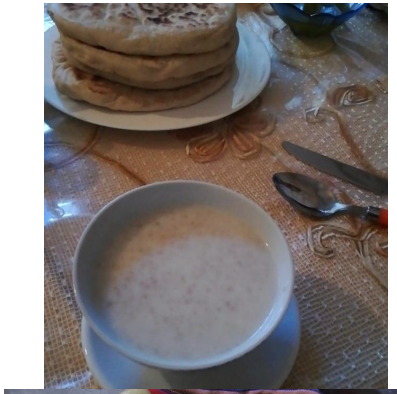

Rabat, the capital of Morocco, is located along the banks of the Bou Regreg River and the Atlantic Ocean. It is known for its iconic landmarks of its Islamic heritage and French colonialism, including the Kasba of the Oudaïa. This Berber royal fortress is surrounded by formal French gardens.

TRADITIONAL FOODS OF MOROCCO

- El Batbout: is one of the typical Moroccan dishes. It is the traditional Arabic bread that never fails at the table
- El Msemmen. The msemmen, also called square Moroccan pancakes due to their shape
- In addition to msemmen, there are also baghrir, Moroccan pitted pancakes with a round shape and characterized by a surface full of porous holes.

RAMADAN

Ramadan means the name of that month of the year which, for the Muslim world, is synonymous with purification. This means that all Muslims who take part in Ramadan cannot drink water, eat, smoke or even have sex from sunrise to sunset.

THE KING OF MOROCCO

Mohammed VI (Arabic: محمد السادس, Muḥammad al-Sādis; Rabat, 21 August 1963) is the current king of Morocco. The ruler belongs to the Alawid sheikh dynasty and took the throne on July 30, 1999, succeeding his father, King Hassan II. He has a younger brother, Prince Mulay Rachid and three sisters: Lalla Meryem, Lalla Asma and Lalla Hasna.
